Galltfaenan Hall

What you can expect from us

We advocate person-centred planning by tailoring individual care plans to the needs of each adult.

At Galltfaenan, we believe that people should set their own goals and decide the pace at which to achieve them. We have also designated a separate part of the home, where we carry out life skills teaching.

- A caring family atmosphere
- Qualified and experienced staff
- Beautiful & safe surroundings
- Welsh-speaking catered for
- Flexible daily routine
- Community activities
- Activities, sports and pastimes are encouraged

The Old Rectory

The Old Rectory, the sister home to Galltfaenan Hall, provides high quality, long term and respite care for adults with learning disabilities.

Set in its own lovely garden with well-tended lawns, the property stands in a convenient location on the outskirts of Trefnant village, in the scenic Denbighshire countryside of North Wales.

"Where everyone is encouraged to achieve their potential and realise their aspirations."

Offering nine spacious, bright and well-appointed single rooms over two floors, we have a great mix of male and female residents, aged 18 and upwards.

Opened in 1989 as a dedicated residential care service facility, The Old Rectory is a wonderful place to live, offering a family-friendly residence, where everyone is encouraged to achieve their full potential.

The Old Rectory

Our Aims

For everyone who resides at The Old Rectory, our aims and philosophies have remained constant. We seek to empower all the individuals in our care, striving to fulfil their emotional, psychological and spiritual needs, so that they can make their own decisions, within an environment that is both caring and supportive.

Our Facilities

The Old Rectory shares the same philosophy as Galltfaenan Hall. Individual respect and dignity is the foundation of our care.

- Privately owned, family-friendly care home
- High standard of care provided by long-standing and fully trained staff
- Flexible daily routine
- Life skills teaching
- Off-site vocational opportunities
- Much interaction with Galltfaenan Hall and sharing of facilities
- The Welsh language is spoken

The Old Rectory is the ideal place to live for those with a learning disability. Highly qualified and dedicated staff, offering superior levels of care, where the routine is seen as important but flexible, ensure that every day is different, relaxed and productive.

History

Galltfaenan was the vision of Edith Adey-Jones, who was responsible for transforming the property into a dedicated care facility in the mid-1970s. Subsequently, The Old Rectory was brought into the fold in 1989, providing a welcome additional residence for those in need of specialist care.

After many years of dedication and service, Edith handed over the reins to her daughter, Diane, who remained active in the business until her untimely death in 2017.

Today, after more than four decades, the two homes have now passed into the third generation of devoted family ownership, with Diane's son, William, at the helm.
